

Doug Biggs is a Managing Partner and Founder of Longo Biggs Injury Law. Doug's practice is entirely focused on representing injured clients due to other's negligence. He has a passion for representing injured clients because he understands that pain can disrupt lives in ways that are unimaginable. Successfully obtaining fair compensation for injured victims is the only way to reconcile that disruption with the negligence that caused it. Doug prioritizes trial advocacy to ensure his clients have access to full justice and believes every single case should be prepared as if it's going to trial.

Doug's experience as lead counsel on injury cases and worker's compensation cases has led to millions of dollars in recovery for his clients. He maximizes compensation to his clients with relentless advocacy and by refusing to entertain disingenuous negotiations and lowball offers from insurance companies. His belief is that trial is the ultimate equalizer and that every client needs to be prepared to go to trial. Doug maintains a client first approach by vigorously fighting for their best interest but also communicating with them on a personal level, allowing his clients to make the decisions which best suit their case.
